If a common ancestor of all living humans is defined as an individual who is a genealogical ancestor of all present-day people, the most recent common ancestor (MRCA) for a randomly mating population would have lived in the very recent past^{1, 2, 3}. However, the random mating model ignores essential aspects of population substructure, such as the tendency of individuals to

The New Virginia Law
To Preserve Racial Integrity

W. A. PLECKER, M. D., State Registrar of Vital Statistics, Richmond, Va.

Senate Bill 219, To preserve racial integrity, passed the House March 8, 1924, and is now a law of the State.

This bill aims at correcting a condition which only the more thoughtful people of Virginia know the existence of.

It is estimated that there are in the State from 10,000 to 20,000, possibly more, near white people, who are known to possess an intermixture of colored blood, in some cases to a slight extent it is true, but

This is the law of Mendel,
And often he maken it plain,
Defectives will breed defectives,
And the insane breed insane.
Oh why do we allow these people
To breed back to the monkey's nest,
To increase our country's burdens
When we should only breed the best?

“The Germans are Beating us at our own Game”: American Eugenics and the German Sterilization Law of 1933

In 1934 the superintendent of the Western State Hospital in Richmond, Virginia, Joseph S. DeJarnette, commented with a mixture of admiration and envy on the German sterilization law that had come into effect on 1 January the same year: “The Germans are beating us at our own game.” (DeJarnette 1933, quoted in Kevles 1995: 116; see Black 2003: 279; Spiro 2009: 364; Kühl 1994: 37) DeJarnette was one of the sympathetic American observers of the implementation of a programme of “race hygiene”, or eugenics, in the Third Reich, some of whom even claimed credit for the German “Law on the prevention of hereditarily diseased progeny” (Gesetz zur
