Matthew 6:22-24

22 The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

24 No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

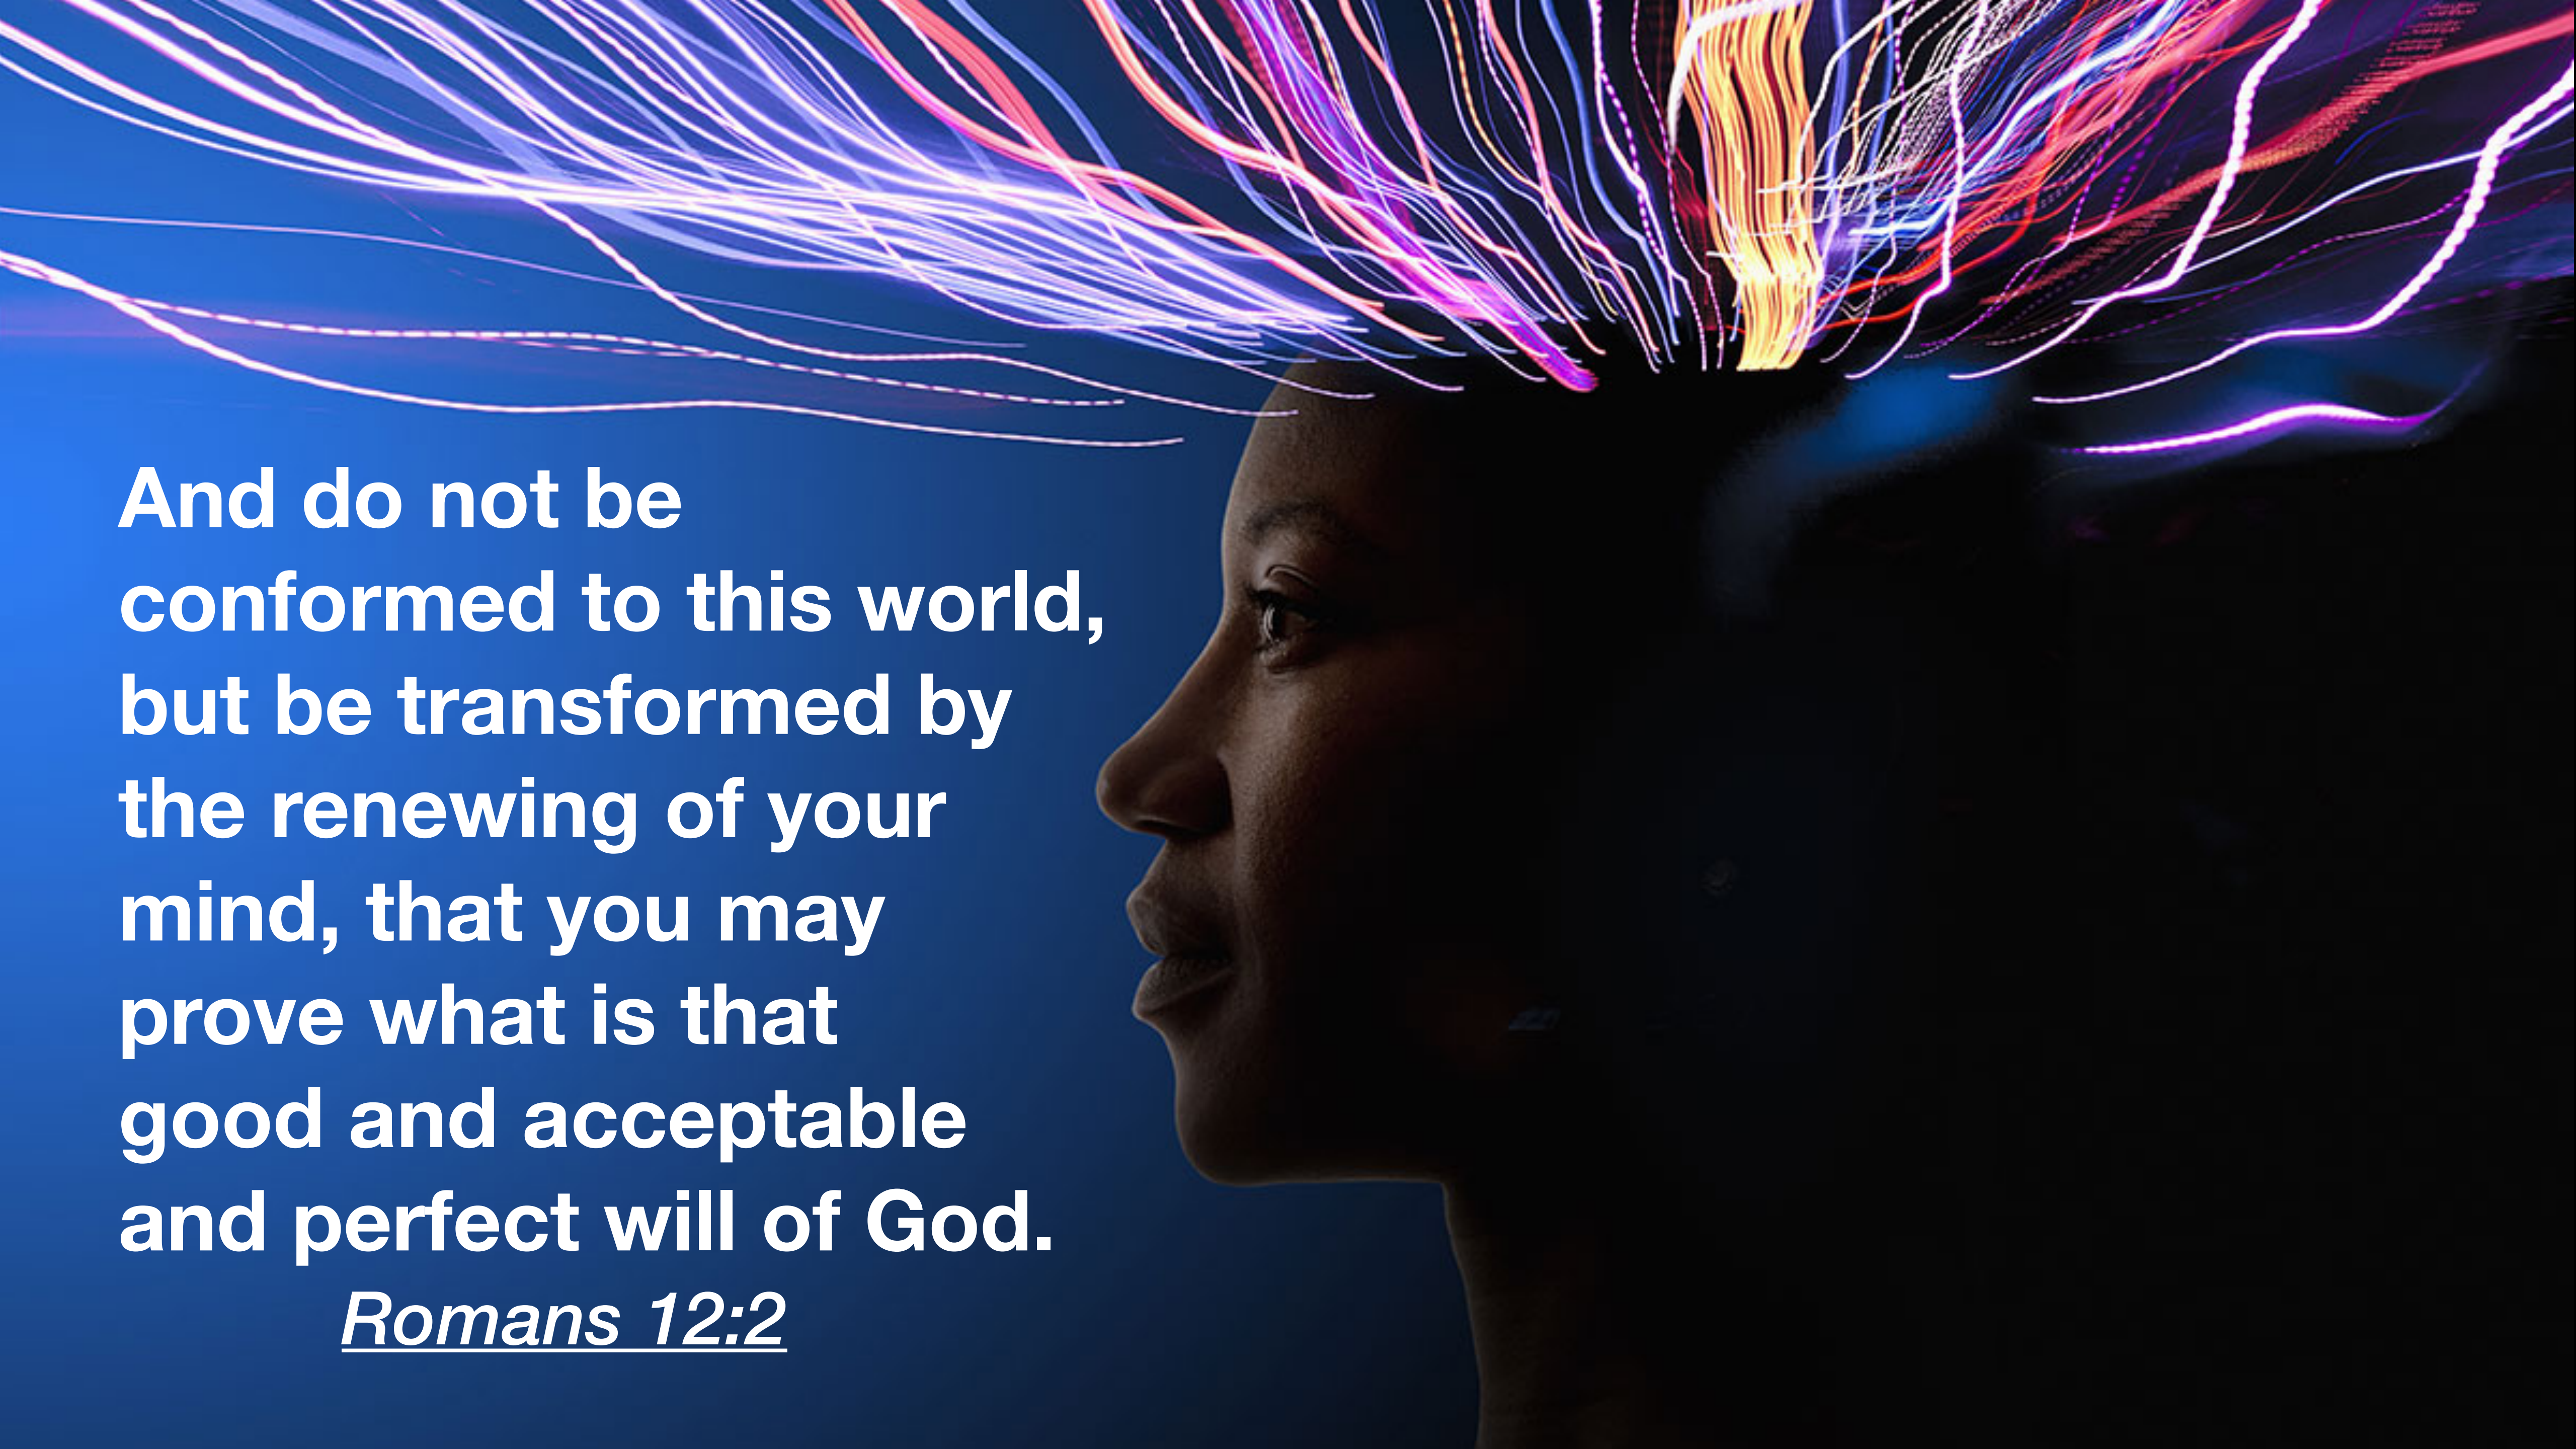

Psalm 101:3

³ I will set no wicked thing before mine eyes: I hate the work of them that turn aside; it shall not cleave to me.

Proverbs 23:7

As a man thinks in his heart, so is he.

A woman's profile is shown in silhouette against a dark blue background. From the top of her head, a dense array of colorful, glowing fiber optic lines radiates outwards, creating a sense of dynamic energy and thought. The lines are primarily purple, blue, and yellow, with some red and white accents. The overall composition suggests a connection between the human mind and modern technology or digital communication.

AMERICAN TIME USE

Did you know that if you work an 8 hour day, you're not the norm? Think your hour or two on Facebook or emailing every day is pretty typical? Think again. The U.S. Department of Labor recently did a survey of how the average American spends their day, the results of which you may find quite surprising.

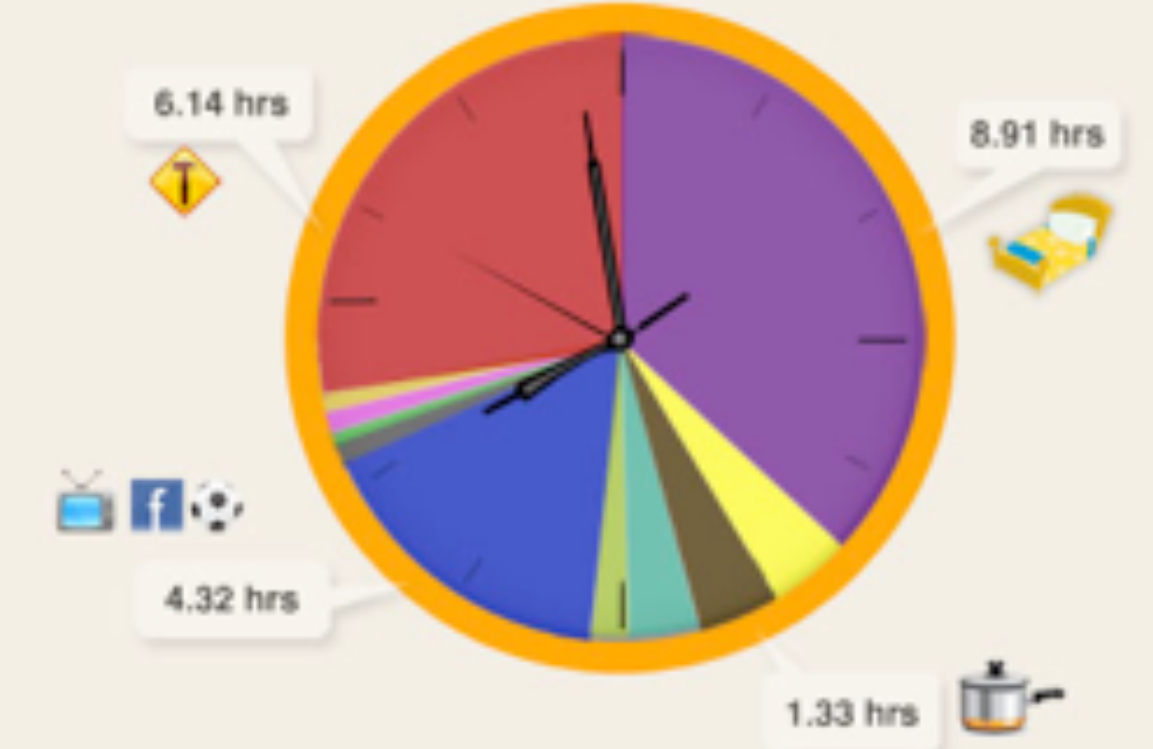

The Average Employed American's Weekday

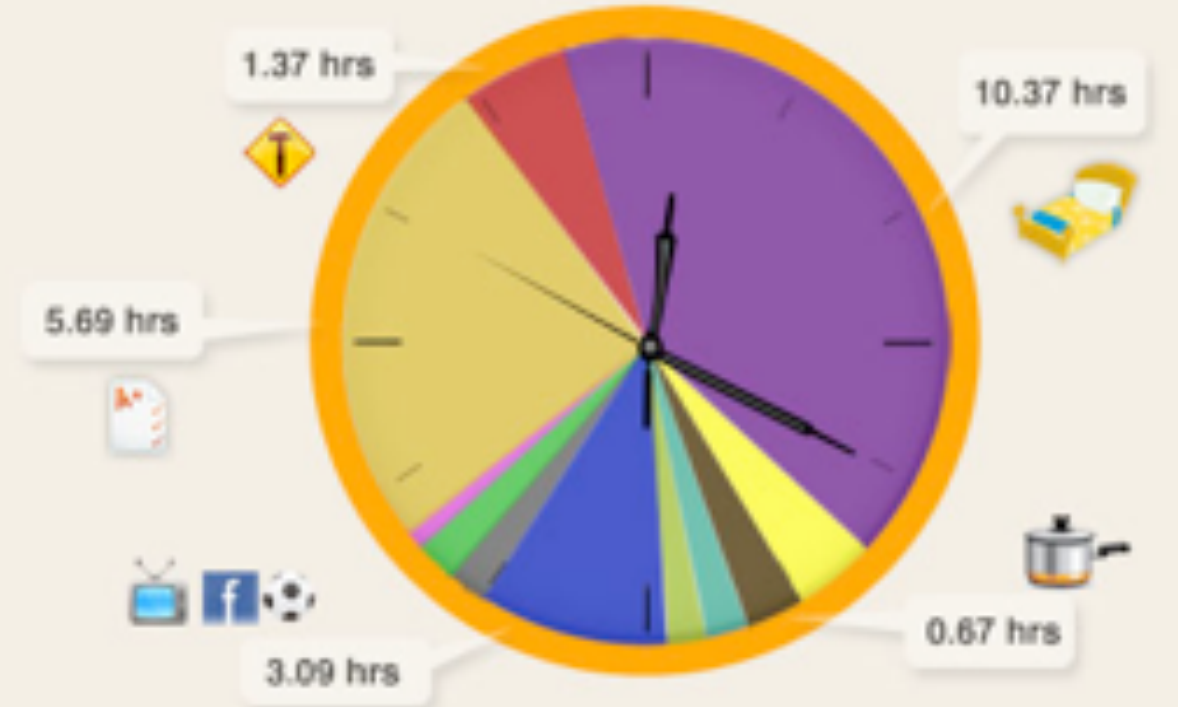

Women Ages 35-44 Years Old

Men Ages 35-44 Years Old

Boys & Girls Ages 15-19 Years Old

The categories in this infographic refer to an individual's main activity. Other activities done simultaneously are not included. All major activity categories include related travel time. TIME FLIES: U.S. ADULTS NOW SPEND NEARLY HALF A DAY INTERACTING WITH MEDIA

MEDIA | 07-31-2018

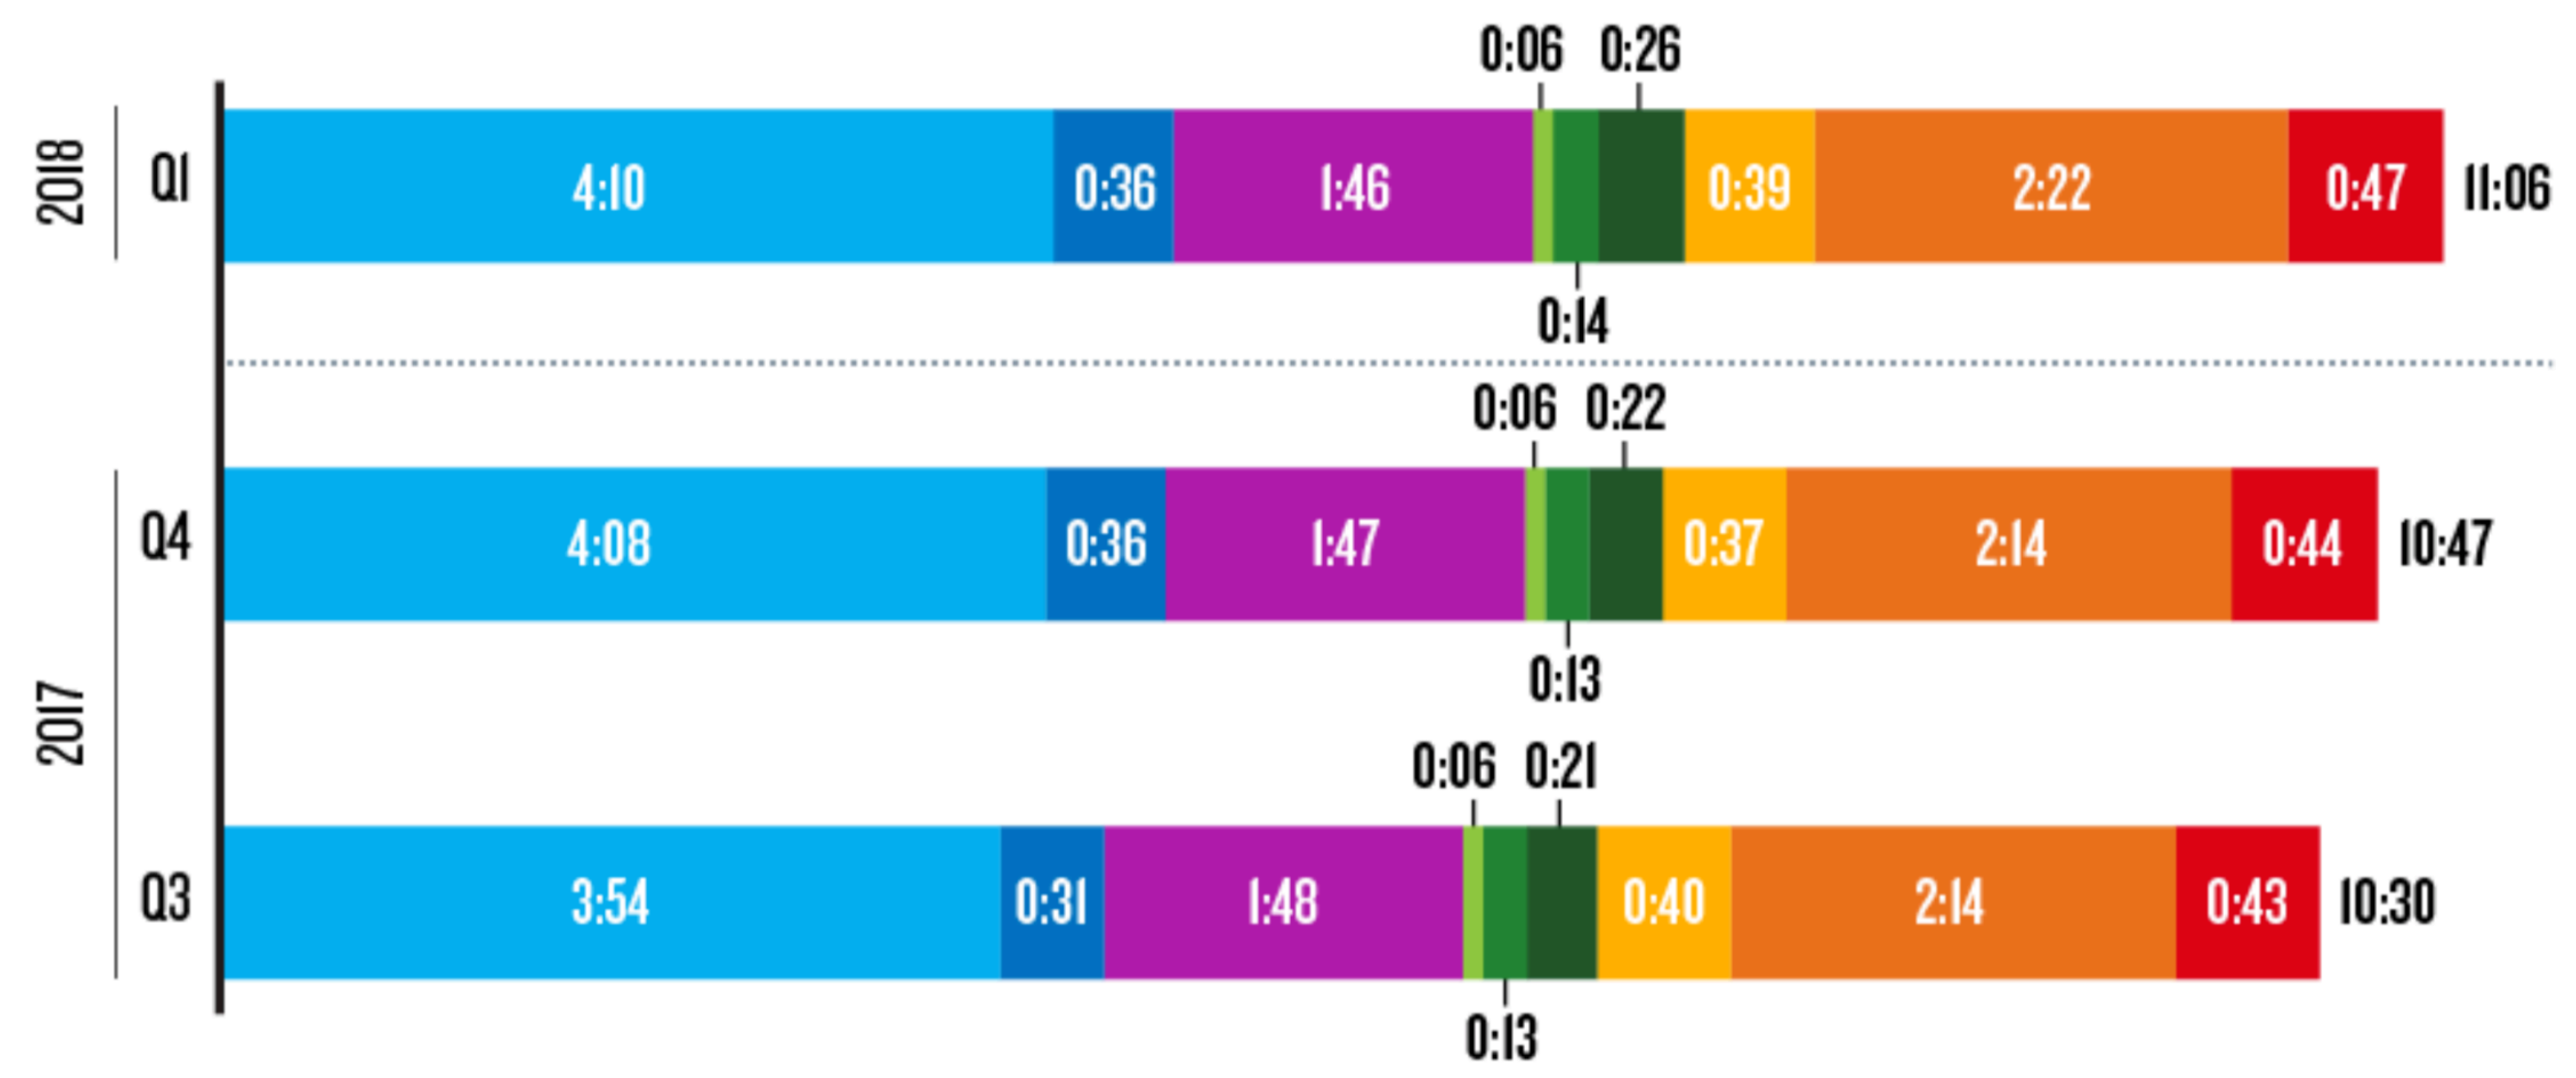

The world has never been more connected, and U.S. audiences have never had as many options to access content as they do these days. In short, consumers in the U.S. seem like they can't get enough content, and the possibilities for marketers to reach them, while fragmented, is an opportunity that is just too good to pass on.

Earlier in the year I formed a really bad habit. I would get home, turn all the lights off, swaddle myself in blankets and slump on my bed to binge-watch four or five episodes of something really, truly gruesome.

First, it was "Midnight Sun," which everyone was talking about and to which I was late to that particular party. Then there was the third season of "The Fall," which chilled me to my core, and the third season of "Broadchurch," likewise. I finally got around to watching " Fargo." I tangoed briefly with "The OA." Most recently, I spent a furious three nights watching Netflix's brilliant docu-series "The Keepers" from start to finish.

THE POWER OF TAYLOR SWIFT

BY JACK DICKEY

ters. She hugged Harvey Weinstein, who got her a role in The Giver, like an old friend.

By night, the waiters had switched to pizza, the crowd had turned civilian, and Swift had replaced her sleek all-black ensemble with a navy dress bearing white polka dots and a gold necklace that read T.S. 1989. When she entered, the brigade of fans, pre-vaillingly female and in their late teens and early 20s, queued behind Caylee like supplicants in want of benediction.

Swift is happy to minister to them. "They're discovering the music that tells them how they are going to live their lives and how they should feel and how it's acceptable to feel," Swift says. "I think that that's kind of exciting." To her fans she has recently started speaking out on two connected matters of importance to her: the music business and feminism.

On Nov. 3, almost all Swift's music vanished from Spotify, the online streaming service that claims over 50 million active users, more than 10 million of whom pay for an ad-free and mobile-ready version. Swift's departure came as a surprise to plenty of those users.

Who among us hasn't fallen victim to a little celebrity worship? Whether the object of our affections are movie stars, athletes, poets or politicians (just look at how many Americans are getting a buzz off Sarah Palin and Barack Obama), we're hungry for information about them. We want to know what they're saying, what they're wearing, where they're going and whom they're with. Indeed, billion-dollar industries revolve around our indefatigable obsession with celebrities. And now new scientific research has found that celebri-crushes are not only common but maybe even healthy: a study published Sept. 10 suggests that the act of celebrity worship may be a boon to some people's self-esteem.

Shira Gabriel, a psychologist at the University at Buffalo, conducted a series of three studies on celebrity worship, focusing specifically on how admiration from afar may affect the admirer's self-esteem. "It was seven or eight years ago during the Michael Jackson trial," she says, "and I was fascinated by the people who were obsessed with him, who flew to the trial and made banners. I thought, What would bring somebody to do second test — almost as high as those who started out with the highest self-esteem scores — after they wrote about their best-loved celebrities. "Because people form bonds in their mind with their favorite celebrities, they are able to assimilate the celebrity's characteristics in themselves and feel better about themselves when they think about that celebrity," says Gabriel. "And that is something these individuals can't do in real relationships because their fear of rejection keeps them from getting close to people."

(WebMD) Brad and Angelina, Tom and Katie, Nick and Jessica - it seems people can't get enough of hearing about the gritty details of celebrities' lives.

It's called being "star struck," and it's a phenomenon that is not only bigger than life - it's bigger than ever.

"You have a confluence of forces coming together in technology and the media to make it happen and it's worldwide and it's multiplying like lice," says Stuart Fischhoff, Ph.D., spokesman for the American Psychological Association and professor emeritus of media psychology at the California State University at Los Angeles.

Indeed, from the international mania of the New York Post's Page Six, to increasing circulation of celebrity-driven publications like People, US, OK, and In Style, to the cult star status of gossip reporters like Entertainment Tonight's Mary Hart and the New York Daily News' Rush & Malloy, there is no question that all-things-celebrity have captured - and are keeping - our attention like never before.

But what drives our endless fascination with celebrity worship? And more important, can its enticing seduction ever be harmful to our health?

The answer, it seems, depends a lot on who is doing the worshipping - and the reasons why.

"Like most things there's a dimensional approach here; there are some people who are fascinated by celebrities lives, but also involved in meaningful activities and relationships in their own lives, and for those people star watching is usually a harmless diversion."

ABSTRACT

Physiological effects have been observed in a human subject in response to stimulation of the skin with weak electromagnetic fields that are pulsed with certain frequencies near $\frac{1}{2}$ Hz or 2.4 Hz, such as to excite a sensory resonance. Many computer monitors and TV tubes, when displaying pulsed images, emit pulsed electromagnetic fields of sufficient amplitudes to cause such excitation. It is therefore possible to manipulate the nervous system of a subject by pulsing images displayed on a nearby computer monitor or TV set. For the latter, the image pulsing may be imbedded in the program material, or it may be overlaid by modulating a video stream, either as an RF signal or as a video signal. The image displayed on a computer monitor may be pulsed effectively by a simple computer program. For certain monitors, pulsed electromagnetic fields capable of exciting sensory resonances in nearby subjects may be generated even as the displayed images are pulsed with subliminal intensity.

14 Claims, 9 Drawing Sheets

perturbations spread by diffusion to circuits. This effect, called "chemical" is so strong that ptosis is lost altogether if the frequency is kept constant in the initial stimulation. Since the stimulation then falls below the resonance, the resonance decreases in amplitude and eventually diminishes. This causes the ptosis to shift back up, so that the stimulation can develop again. As a result, at frequencies in a certain range, the ptosis can be maintained with a frequency of several minutes. This is described in the '302 patent.

Frequencies at which specific physiological responses depend somewhat on the autonomic nervous system and probably on the endocrine state as well.

Fields that are pulsed with a sensory frequency can induce the same physiological responses as static fields. Unlike the latter however, they penetrate biological tissue with nearly equal ease. Eddy currents in the tissue drive charges to the skin, where the charge distributions are smeared in much the same way as in electrostatic induction, so that the same physiological stream may be modulated such as to overlay the pulsing. In the first case, a live TV broadcast can be arranged to have the feature imbedded simply by slightly pulsing the illumination of the scene that is being broadcast. This method can of course also be used in making movies and recording video tapes and DVDs.

Video tapes can be edited such as to overlay the pulsing by means of modulating hardware. A simple modulator is discussed wherein the luminance signal of composite video is pulsed without affecting the chroma signal. The same effect may be introduced at the consumer end, by modulating the video stream that is produced by the video source. A DVD can be edited through software, by introducing pulse-like variations in the digital RGB signals. Image intensity pulses can be overlaid onto the analog component video output of a DVD player by modulating the luminance signal component. Before entering the TV set, a television signal can be modulated such as to cause pulsing of the image intensity by means of a variable delay line that is connected to a pulse generator.

Certain monitors can emit electromagnetic field pulses that excite a sensory resonance in a nearby subject, through image pulses that are so weak as to be subliminal. This is unfortunate since it opens a way for mischievous application

Certain monitors can emit electromagnetic field pulses that excite a sensory resonance in a nearby subject, through image pulses that are so weak as to be subliminal. This is unfortunate since it opens a way for mischievous application of the invention, whereby people are exposed unknowingly to manipulation of their nervous systems for someone else's purposes. Such application would be unethical and is of course not advocated. It is mentioned here in order to alert the public to the possibility of covert abuse that may occur while being online, or while watching TV, a video, or a DVD.

T H A N O S

THE INFINITY GAUNTLET

THE SPACE Gem

Allows the user to exist in any or all locations, move any object anywhere throughout reality and warp or rearrange space. At full potential it grants Omnipresence.

KNOWN OWNERS:

Runner, Thanos Nebula
Adam Warlock, Pip the Troll,
Magus, Rune, Loki, Galactus,
Iron Man, Hood, Odeni,
Namor, Black Panther, Black
Widow

THE POWER Gem

Accesses all power and energy that ever has or will exist, and can boost the other gems' effects. Allows the user to duplicate almost any physical superhuman ability and grants nigh Omnipotence. It also grants the possessor the potential to manipulate all forms of energy for virtually any effect.

KNOWN OWNERS:

Champion of the Universe,
Thanos, Drax the Destroyer,
Thor, Magus, Rune, Lord
Pumpkin, Loki, Galactus,
She-Hulk, Titania, Mister
Fantastic, Red Hulk, Namor

THE SOUL Gem

Allows the user to steal, control, manipulate and alter souls, living or dead, and is the gateway to an idyllic pocket universe that is much like heaven. It also has the ability to steal the powers and abilities of others, which is why people argue that this gem is more powerful than the other gems. The Soul Gem is sentient and has a hunger for souls. It is often considered to be the most dangerous and corrupt of all the gems. Mastery of the gem would allow the user to control all life in the universe.

KNOWN OWNERS:

High Evolutionary, Adam
Warlock, Gardener, In-
Betweener, Thanos,
Nebula, Count Abyss,
Magus, Rune, Odeni,
Gemini, Loki, Galactus,
Syphonn, Dr. Strange

THE REALITY Gem

Allows the user to fulfill wishes, even if the wish is in direct contradiction with scientific laws. Occasionally stated to be the most powerful of the Gems if wielded without the other Gems to keep its reality-altering powers from accidentally surging out of control.

KNOWN OWNERS:

Stranger, Collector,
Thanos, Nebula, Adam
Warlock, Rune, Night-
Man, Loki, Galactus,
Black Bolt, Hood, Iron
Man, Black Widow

THE MIND Gem

Allows the user to greatly strengthen and enhance mental and psionic power and access the thoughts and dreams of other beings. Backed by the Power Gem, the Mind Gem can access all minds in existence simultaneously. When searching for it, the Grandmaster apparently discovered that the Mind Gem was the manifestation of the universal subconscious.

KNOWN OWNERS:

Grandmaster, Thanos,
Nebula, Adam Warlock,
Moondragon, Magus,
Rune, Primevil, Loki,
Galactus, Professor X,
Odeni, Hood, Ms. Marvel,
Beast, Black Widow

THE TIME Gem

Allows the user total control over the past, present and future. “ In Necropolis. The Wakandan City of the dead...where Black Panthers go to die. And where you will rule. As king of the dead. Every Panther that has ever lived, their strength, their knowledge is now yours. Every battle fought...every battle won. Unbeaten. Unbroken. A crown of the unconquered. A king of kings. My champion. To the law and to the testimony: if it speaks not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.

Isaiah 8:19-20

5 This then is the message which we have heard of him [Jesus], and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not [have] the truth:

7 But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

1 John 1:5-7

Ephesians 5:8

Children
of the LIGHT

For at one time you were darkness, but now you are light in the Lord. Walk as children of light.

If we would at last share the reward of the righteous, we must wisely improve the time of our probation. Moments are more precious than gold.... – {OUR HIGH CALLING 187.2}

Time is Gold

Don't waste time anymore, precious the time we have

Life is short. The things of the world must perish with the using. Let us be wise, and build for eternity. We cannot afford to idle away our precious moments, or engage in busy activities that will bring forth no fruit for eternity. Let the time hitherto devoted to idleness, frivolity, worldliness, be spent in gaining a knowledge of the Scriptures, in beautifying our life, and blessing and ennobling the life and character of others. This work will meet the approval of God, and win for us the heavenly benediction of “Well done.”

– {OUR HIGH CALLING 187.6}

Satan's Strategy Is to Confuse the Senses — Satan's work is to lead men to ignore God, to so engross and absorb the mind that God will not be in their thoughts. The education they have received has been of a character to confuse the mind and eclipse the true light. Satan does not wish the people to have a knowledge of God; and if he can set in operation games and theatrical performances that will so confuse the senses of the young that human beings will perish in darkness while light shines all about them, he is well pleased.
